WICHITA MARKETS.

Receipts of Live Stock at the Union Stock Yards during the past 24 hours-160 cattle, and 1,700 hogs. Shipments 27 cattle, 758 hogs.

The supply of cattle was quite large.

The market was as mean as it could possibly be as to prices, owing to the awfui condition of the Chicago and Kansas City markets. Thousands of cattle are being carried at the yards at those points with markets. Thousands of cattle are being carried at the yards at those points with no buyers. Good fat butchers, stuff sells fairly well, but there is no sale for the half fat, dry weather stuff with which the markets are flooded. The buyers, especially shippers, did not take hold strong today as some of them have cattle on the Kansas bulk of the offerings. One load of choice packers and a few head of heavies sold at $3.50. Old sows, skips and bulls are slow sale at very low prices. The market closed strong and more hogs would have sold late at $3.47% had they been on the market.

WICHITA LIVE STOCK MARKET.

CATTLE

The supply was quite. Hieral and demand fairly good on choice grades. But prices got a "black eye" as the market was off 30 to 30 cents. Kansas City is overrun with dry weather stuff for which there is no sale and they quote the market 50 to 50 cents lower and few boyers at the decline. Most of the cattle sales today were to the packers. Shippers may except the poorest kind of a market for several days in everything but good to choice lat cattle.

There is some controversy as to the pres ent whereabouts as well as to the actual imposition of the famous "Standard of Mohammed," the "Sanyak-Sherif" or sared flag of Mohammedism. According to The North German Gazette it is in the mucum of artillery at Turin, Italy. The Gazette says that it was formerly in the nosque of Abon Ayoub, Constantinople, but that Earon Tecco, the Sardinian amassador, purchased it in the year 1889 and sent it to King Charles Albert. The same account says that it is of red silk, with several verses from the Koran embroidered upon it in yellow letters, and that its neight is slightly over 6 feet and its width Thoughts on the Ocean Wave. Somehow you never realize the great bigness of this world until you are stretched out on a steamer chair and look at the vast expanse of water all about you. It makes yon feel as you never felt before, how little you are and how big God is. It makes you wonder how many times that great monster, the deep, has taken into its arms women who are happy and those who are not, little children who are loved and great, strong men who had thought nothing ould conquer them. the first man was that went a sailing and where he got his courage. You wonder whether people realize the difference between going across the seean new and crossing it twenty-five years ago, and then on wonder if everybody ever does rememer all their mercies. - London Letter.

Teach the children to give away from their own pennies, and not come to papa's pocket every Sunday morning. True generosity can easily begin then. Stimulate them to save by offering to double every dollar earned if it goes in the bank or for some approved purpose. A child enjoys the freedom of ever so small an amount, and adding the knowledge that he has really earned it makes him feel a hundred old more manly than he whose wishes are gratified before they are spoken -Good Housekeeping.

TO MY LOVE.

The torrent leaves the mountain And joins the crystal tide That flows along in beauty Till it meets the occan wide.

And, love, when thou are absent.
The thought occurs to me
That my heart's love is a torrent,
And thy bosom is its eea.

The sephyr stirs the light leaves With a sweetly scothing sound, And the red rose, in its blooming, Sheds its perfume all around. And as I muse europhyred In this, my calm retreat, The south wind seems thy whisper

And thy breath the perfume sweet I see the ivy clinging
Around the wildwood tree,
And as I view its tendrils
This thought occurs to me: Thy white arms are the ivy.

Nursed by thy heart's deep spring.

And my neek the wildwood monarch

'Round which they closely cling.

—New York Weekly. SOMEBODY'S BOY.

> The Whole Line Cheered, and at Least One Voice Was for an Enemy Spared. As we were falling back upon Malvern Hill, in the Peninsular campaign, the rear guard fighting back the Confederate advance, our brigade was wheeled to the left and another to the right to cover the nar-row highway and give the wounded and stragglers an opportunity to close up. Across the fields, which were broken and wooded, advanced the enemy's skirmishers, followed by a double line of bat-tle. We checked them with a voiley, but they re-formed and charged with a cheer. I could see their faces very plainly under the smoke, and as they rushed forward I noticed that the man directly in front of me was not a man, but a stripling of a boy. He didn't look to be more than 15 years old, and his face was white and scarred. I had a dead rest with my musket, and this boy coming straight me. Had he been a man I should have killed him. I could have hit him with my eyes shut. When I saw that it was a box I could not fire upon him. I covered him once, but his scared face turned my gun

We let them come charging up until some of the more impetuous were over us, and then there was an awful crash of musketry, a great billow of flame-a thousand cries and curses. The flame of death had licked up their lines. looking for the boy as the smoke lifted. He stood, musket in hand, looking about him as if paralyzed. Every man had gone down for ten feet either side of him. As our cheers burst forth the boy faced around with the remainder of the line and retreat ed to cover. I rejoiced over his escape, and I hoped that if another charge was made he would not be with them.

Half an hour passed, and now we were the rear guard—a brigade holding the nar-row road. We saw the enemy massing for another charge, and again we made ready to receive them. As they came forward I saw the same white faced boy, this time a little to my left.

"Don't shoot that boy!" I called to the men beyond me. third man on the left was in line with the boy. He looked up at me with a sardonic smile, and then he rested his musket and covered the boy, to kill him when the word came to fire. An enemy was an enemy to him whether boy or man. He was there to kill. I held my breath as the double line again advanced. A little closer, and they fired a volley, and then charged. They sought our death-they were following us to destroy-they had no mercy. And yet as I fired into the smoke knowing that my bullet must find a human target, I was consoled by the reflec-tion that I was not shooting at the boy— somebody's boy—If he was killed it would be by the man on my left, and he must answer for it.

The enemy could not budge us. They couldn't touch our flanks, and a charge in front was simply slaughter. Our volleys broke their lines, decimated them, threw them into confusion, and they were breastaway among the tree tops, and my heart bounded as I saw Somebody's Boy again.

Just as I got a glimpse of him the three turned to obey the call to retreat, and I swung my can and cheered. Our whole line was cheering, the others because they had once more repulsed the enemy, and I because omebody's Boy had again escaped. And when I looked along our line to the eft, wondering how the man with the grim face and murderous heart bad missed his target, I saw him lying dead on the grand, stone dead. A builet had struck him fair in the forehead.—Detroit Free Press.

The Freckle Faced Girl. "What has become of the freekle faced girl?" mildly suggested an observing old gentleman. "I declare I believe the crop is somewhat backward this season: for, on my honor, the freckle faced girl is quite a rarity. I don't know whether it's too early or too late.

"I didn't have anything better to do this last half hour, so I just stood by this hotel window, commanding a view of the street, for the girl with the freckled cheeks, such a girl as we all remember in the early days, who used to go to the old red school house on the hill, go fishing with us in summer, and used to make our beart flutter flutter te-flut when she granted us the inestimable boon of strapping on her old red skates preparatory to a spin on the frozen pond.

"But, alas, I waited in vain; and al-though there were hundreds of women passing, young and old, I only found a very select few who were the freckles of onr youth. It can't be," said the old gen-tleman-"it can't be that freekles have gone out of fashion. On the other hand, it must be that the girls are more skilled in the use of-of-yes, you know."-Detroit Free Press.
